Declare Your Independence

July 4th, or more correctly, Independence Day, is always a good landmark to plan your summer calendar around. The weather isn't morbidly hot yet, and our natural gag reflex to people who use "summer" and "weekend" as verbs hasn't kicked in.

Apart from a good excuse to drink all day long, July 4th weekends usually include an awful lot of outdoor grilling. Or "barbe-quing," for you traditionalists out there. We always have mixed feelings about this particular pastime. Probably owing to the fact that we always have bring our own pack of tofu pups with us wherever we go, leading to the same social outcast vibe as a junior high schooler with the wrong sneakers.

We've tried to butch it up a bit recently by bringing tofu bratwurst instead, but the less said about that social experiment, the better.

A quick survey of our club-savvy cohorts find that the Hamptons are big on the to-do list for this weekend. Paul says, "I'm going to the restaurant Laundry and Star Room for cocktails, then heading back to the shared house to sit in the hot tub with the crew."

Stacy is also hitting Star Room, "It's a trendy spot but not a diverse crowd," she says. "It has three sections which includes a nice outdoor area with tables and couches. I go for the guaranteed good-looking crowd."

Ericka is heading in the opposite direction. She says, "This weekend I'm heading to the Jersey Shore for a weekend full of beach parties at DJais in Belmar while hopefully fitting in some concerts outside of the Stone Pony in Asbury Park."

Our resident DJ, Johnny, is also hitting DJais and Star Room, but he also turned us on to a Saturday night event here in Manhattan. "Saturday, there's a big thing going on the Hammerstein Ballroom," he says. "Five DJs are playing, including Louie DeVito, Christopher Lawrence Donald Glaude and to top it all off, a live performance from Steve-O and the Jackass crew."

If you're staying in the city, you might also want to check out Paul Oakenfold and Derrick Carter at Avalon. Oakenfold's tonight, Carter on Saturday. You can get tickets at clubplanet.com, including a special two-day weekend pass.
